Welcome Message

It is with great pleasure that we invite you to join us at the “1st Asian Paediatric Pulmonology Society Annual Scientific Congress” cum “18th Hong Kong Society of Paediatric Respiriology and Allergy Annual Scientific Meeting” which will be held on 3-5 October 2015 in Hong Kong and Macao. The meeting will provide a strong scientific programme, enjoyable social activities, and importantly an opportunity to exchange and compare professional practice.

The organizing committee will organize a most comprehensive and exciting programme that will be interesting and relevant to specialist, general practitioners and allied-health professionals alike. A variety of programmes and learning modes will be offered. The programme addresses scientific and clinical topics, in addition to relevant topics on professional issues. Our international and regional speakers represent the forefront of practice in their special interests, and will update you on the best current practice.

The organizing committee is working very hard to put together a truly memorable meeting in October. We look forward to warmly welcoming every delegate. Your attendance will no doubt prove to be a valuable and enjoyable experience both scientifically and socially.

Yours sincerely,

Dr. Daniel Ng

Attractions in Hong Kong and Macao

Tsim Sha Tsui Promenade and Avenue of Stars

Starting at the colonial-era Clock Tower and stretching all the way to Hung Hom, a stroll along the Tsim Sha Tsui Promenade takes one past the Hong Kong Cultural Centre, the Hong Kong Space Museum, the Hong Kong Museum of Art and Avenue of Stars. But like most of the love birds and shutterbugs on the promenade, your gaze will be drawn south to the dramatic topographical and architectural spectacle that is the Hong Kong Island skyline towering over the busy waters of Victoria Harbour.

Jade Market and Jade Street

Jade has been long associated with long life and good health in Chinese culture, making it a prized material for good-luck charms. Few Hong Kong newborns will be left to start life without a jade bracelet from grandma, and people of all ages receive new amulets each year based on their zodiac signs and computations of the ancient Chinese almanac. In Hong Kong, the jade business is most active at the Jade Market in Kowloon. While there's been a lot of redevelopment in the area in recent years, some vestiges of its past have been saved, such as the colonial-era police station. Nearby, a three-tonne jade stone marks the strip of Canton Road known as Jade Street. However, if shopping takes your fancy over architecture and monuments, you won't be disappointed with the quality and quantity of jade being sold by the more than hundreds of stalls here.

Temple Street Night Market

When the sun goes down, the traders have already laid out their wares and the opera singers and fortune tellers begin to emerge. Welcome to the Temple Street Night Market, a popular street bazaar, named after a Tin Hau temple located in the centre of its main drag, and a place so steeped in local atmosphere that it has served as the backdrop to many a memorable movie. Trinkets, tea ware, electronics, watches, menswear, jade and antiques are scrutinised and haggled over, while claypot rice, seafood, noodles and other treats are consumed with gusto.

Ladies' Market

With over 100 stalls of bargain clothing, accessories and souvenirs, the Ladies' Market on Tung Choi Street provides a one-kilometre stretch on which to practise your haggling skills. It gets its name from the huge amount of clothing and accessories on sale for women of all ages; however, with watches, cosmetics, bags, home furnishings, CDs and trinkets also up for grabs, you don't need to be just in the market for a pair of nylon stockings to find something within its crowded aisles.

Macao Tower

For views of the Pearl River Delta by day or the city lights by night, nothing surpasses the Macao Tower. Having ascended to the Tower's upper limits in high-speed glass-fronted lifts, an unforgettable vista awaits you, while a delicious buffet caters for all tastes at the 360°

Café. The Tower is 338m high at its highest point. The Tower was designed principally by Gordon Moller of CCMBECA, New Zealand.

Ruins of St. Paul's

Arguably Macau's most famous landmark, the Ruins of St. Paul's was officially listed in 2005 as part of the UNESCO World Heritage site, the Historic Centre of Macau. Originally built in the 16th century, the complex of St. Paul's College and the Cathedral of St. Paul burned down and was rebuilt multiple times before the third and final fire during a typhoon in 1835 left it beyond repair. All that remains are the iconic stone façade and the grand staircase leading up to it. Restored into a museum, the façade is buttressed from behind, allowing tourists to climb up to the windows to get a closer look at the stone carvings and to enjoy a panoramic view of the city below. The Museum of Sacred Art and Crypt was built at the bottom of the ruins and houses many religious artifacts including Sino-Portuguese crucifixes, as well as a 17th century painting of St. Michael Archangel – the only surviving work from the original college.

The Venetian Macao - Gondola Rides

Nothing could be more romantic or intimate than taking a serene gondola ride down the canals of Venice inside the Venetian Macao-Resort-Hotel. Guided by your very own Gondolier singing Italian opera melodies, you and your partner are in for a most enchanting time.

Kwun Ya Kai – Taipa

Taipa is famous for an array of traditional desserts and snacks, including wife cakes, meat pastries, chicken biscuits and fermented red bean curd biscuits. In the old town of Taipa, many cake shops have been run for several generations. On Kwun Ya Kai (Rua do Cunha), you will be tempted by the smell of newly baked cakes and biscuits wafting out of the cake shops. Many local cake shops sell a variety of delicious desserts and cakes, which are much sought-after by tourists as souvenirs typical of Macao. Moreover, there are the famous Portuguese-style egg tarts, which are sold in most cafes and cake shops.
